This is why so many advertisers utilise online review aggregator platforms to build up as many reviews as they can. Unfortunately, not all reviews you receive may be genuine.
The problem of fake negative reviews
The first step to tackling fake Google reviews is to make sure you are certain the review is indeed fake. Negative reviews, particularly those from angry customers, can appear to be slanderous in nature, but if based on a real interaction, they cannot be considered fake.
The reviewer offers no comment or elaboration about their experience
If you do not recognise the customer and their complaint cannot be linked to your service, this can also be acknowledged, for example:
How to report fake reviews to google small business support
The representative will then review your case and advise you on what happens next. If your complaint is successful, the review will be removed.
