How does a Round Robin Work?

A round-robin bet is a parlay or teaser with three or more games, or "legs," where you are actually betting multiple smaller combinations involving your selections instead of lumping them into one must-win-all wager. Example: You choose teams A, B and C to win their games against teams D, E and F, respectively.

In a three-team standard parlay, teams A, B and C must win for you to collect. However, in a round-robin wager, you are actually betting three two-team parlays involving your three selections: A two-team parlay where teams A and B must win, a two-team parlay where teams B and C must win and a two-team parlay where teams A and C must win.

If all three win, you win each of the three two-team payouts.

With a four-team round-robin, you can choose whether to bet the six different two-team parlay combinations, the four different three-team combinations, or both.
